Markle Man Misses His Lung In New Billboards

By Maggie Fox, Health and Science Correspondent

Thursday April 22 WASHINGTON (Reuters) - The Marlboro Man started making way for a new message Thursday -- a cowboy telling his buddy he has emphysema, a cemetery full of crosses and other billboards bearing antismoking messages.

Under a settlement reached in November with 46 states, the major tobacco companies have agreed to turn over the leases on more than 4,100 advertising billboards to be used for antismoking messages. Thursday was the deadline.

"They are scheduled to come down officially at midnight tonight," CDC spokesman Ellwyn Grant said.

"This is a significant step in the effort to limit the ability of the tobacco companies to market their products to kids," Bill Novelli, president of the Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids, said in a statement.

Under the agreement, tobacco companies agreed to pay states $206 billion and submit to advertising and marketing restrictions, including the handover of the billboard leases.

The restrictions ban all outdoor advertising including billboards in arenas, stadiums and shopping malls. They also bar distribution and sale of clothing and merchandise such as caps, T-shirts and backpacks with brand name logos.

Tobacco companies will also be barred from using cartoons in the advertising and packaging of tobacco products.

The deal includes cigarette makers Philip Morris Cos., the world's largest, RJR Nabisco Holdings Corp., Brown and Williamson Tobacco Corp. and Lorillard Inc., as well as smokeless tobacco maker UST Corp.

'And Europe's Worst Linguists Are...'

Tuesday February 20 BRUSSELS (Reuters) - The British are the European Union's worst linguists while the citizens of Luxembourg are the best, according to an EU poll published Monday.

Almost two-thirds of Britons know no language apart from their mother tongue, the highest figure recorded in the 15 EU countries in the European Commission's "Eurobarometer" survey.

That compares to just 2.2 percent in Luxembourg, 12.3 percent of Danes and an EU average of 47.3 percent of people who speak no other language but their own, the poll of 16,000 EU citizens said.

But British travelers to Europe need not worry.

Although 47 percent of EU citizens know only their mother tongue, there is wide agreement that speaking a foreign language is a good thing.

Across the EU, 72 percent of those polled believe foreign language skills are useful, 71 percent said everyone should know one foreign language and 69 percent said everyone should speak English.
