I. Reading Section (20 marks)

Read the text about Japan.

Living in the skies

Louise Hidalgo considers life in the 21st century, with two-kilometre high buildings, and Japanese cities that touch the sky.

Imagine a building one third of the height of Mount Everest, built by robots, and containing a whole city. Imagine you can walk out of your front door in a T-shirt and shorts on a cold winter’s day and take a lift down 500 floors to school. Imagine you can see the sea a mile below you. Imagine you can never open a window. Imagine . . .

Well, if Japanese architects find enough money for their project, in the 21st century you’ll be able to live in a building like that.

Ohbayashi Gumi has designed a two-kilometre high building, Aeropolis, which will stand right in the middle of Tokyo Bay. Over 300,000 people will live in it. It will be 500 floors high, and in special lifts it will take just 15 minutes to get from top to bottom. Restaurants, offices, flats, cinemas, schools, hospitals, and post offices will all be just a few lift stops away. According to the architects, Aeropolis will be the first ‘city to touch the skies’.

‘When we get to the end of this century, Tokyo will have a population of over 15 million people,’ said design manager Mr Shuzirno. ‘There isn’t enough land in Japan. We’re going to start doing tests to find the best place to build it. I hope people will like living on the 500th floor.’

Going up and up. It will take twenty-five years to build Aeropolis and it will cost over £2,000 million.

Won’t people want to have trees and flowers around them? ‘We’re going to have green floors, where children can play and office workers can eat their lunch-break sandwiches,’ explained Mr Shuzirno. What about fires? ‘If there is a fire, it will be put out by robots. I hope we’ll get the money we need to build. As soon as we do, we’ll start. This will be the most exciting building in the world.’

Answer the following questions. (9 marks)

8. Where will people be able to go to relax?
9. What do the architects need?
Read about Kimiko.

There are now more than two dozen Japanese companies in Tyne and Wear in the northeast of England. Many Japanese families now live there.

Kimiko Kinoshita Wood came to Britain as a bride six years ago. "There is much more freedom for women here," she says. "It is sometimes difficult for Japanese women to adjust." For Kimiko, the change was easy because she is a translator and speaks English fluently. Also, she has an English husband. "Attitudes to women are very different," she says. "Japanese wives come to Britain and after a while they discover they can have a life of their own outside the home. They don't have that kind of freedom in Japan."

In Japan, it is unusual to see men shopping with their wives, helping in the house, or babysitting. But Kimiko's husband, John, a shipping engineer, happily lends a hand with the children. John says that Japanese husbands soon adapt in Britain, and seem to relax more with their families.

Education is one thing that worries Kimiko. In Japan, children go to school six days a week and work much harder than English children. Another complaint is that shops don't have many clothes for small women.
