World stunned as US struggles with Katrina
By Andrew Gray

LONDON, Fri Sep 2 (Reuters) - The world has watched amazed as the planet's only superpower struggles with the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, with some saying the chaos has shown flaws and deep divisions in American society.

World leaders and ordinary citizens have expressed sympathy with the people of the southern United States whose lives were devastated by the hurricane and the flooding that followed.

But many have also been shocked by the images of disorder beamed around the world -- looters roaming the debris-strewn streets and thousands of people gathered in New Orleans waiting for the authorities to provide food, water and other aid.

The pictures of the catastrophe -- which has killed hundreds and possibly thousands -- have evoked memories of crises in the world's poorest nations such as last year's tsunami in Asia, which left more than 230,000 people dead or missing.

But some think the response to those disasters was better than the lawless behavior of Hurricane Katrina.

"I am absolutely disgusted. After the tsunami our people, even the ones who lost everything, wanted to help the others who were suffering," said one man in Sri Lanka, as he watched a cricket match in Colombo, Sri Lanka.

"Not a single tourist caught in the tsunami was mugged. Now with all this happening in the U.S. we can easily see where the civilized part of the world's population is."

Romania Students Don't Want Math Exams

BUCHAREST, Romania Wednesday September 22 (Reuters) - Hundreds of Romanian schoolchildren walked out of classes Wednesday for the second straight day and swarmed government offices to denounce the inclusion of mathematics as a compulsory subject. "We want justice, not math exams," read a banner carried aloft by pupils outside the colonnaded government headquarters.

The protesters were pupils in the final year of high school studies specializing in chemistry, physics and biology who say their workload is too heavy to study mathematics properly.

Under an education law passed this year to adapt post-communist education to Western standards, science students must pass a mathematics examination plus other subjects to secure their "baccalaureat," required for further studies.

"We don't like mathematics and we don't need it to develop our skills," a teenage girl told a private television station.

Officials said they had no intention of changing curricula.
